RATIONALE
Homework should be educationally beneficial and should meet the realistic expectations of students, teachers, parents and caregivers.

PURPOSE
Homework is most beneficial when:

• it reinforces and extends classwork and consolidates basic skills and knowledge
• it is challenging and purposeful, but not so demanding that it has adverse effects on the student’s motivation
• student take responsibility for their homework, supported by their parents or caregivers
• it is well coordinated and teacher expectations are well communicated
• it is set on a regular basis and establishes a routine of home study
• teachers set suitable amounts of homework which are varied and at an appropriate level considering the age, stage of schooling and capabilities of students
• it takes into account student’s home responsibilities and extra curricular activities such as clubs, sport and music
• it is marked promptly and accurately
• feedback and follow up are provided regularly to students
• it develops and extends the core learning skill of inquiry.
• it reaffirms the role of parents and caregivers as partners in education.

TYPES OF HOMEWORK
The amount of time that students are expected to spend on homework will depend upon the age, ability, home environment and extracurricular activities of students, including family and cultural obligations. It is important that students of all ages have opportunities for free time, leisure and physical activities outside of school.

The three main types of homework are:

Practice Exercises – providing students with the opportunities to apply new knowledge or review, revise and reinforce newly acquired skills, including:

• consolidation exercises eg maths, including memorisation of tables.
• practicing for mastery eg spelling words.
• revising information about a current topic.
• reading for pleasure.

Preparatory Homework – providing opportunities for students to gain background information on a unit of study so that they are better prepared for future lessons, including:

• reading
• researching topics for a class unit of work.
• collecting items, eg geometric shapes.
Extension Assignments – encouraging students to pursue knowledge individually and imaginatively, including:

- making or designing something, eg an art work.
- investigations, eg science, social science.
- researching, eg history, local news.

GUIDELINES

Years 3 – 6 (Stages 2 and 3)

Children will be set specific homework tasks on a regular basis. They will become more independent in their study and will experience different types of homework.

Most homework is likely to be set in the areas of English, Mathematics and Human Society and Its Environment. It could be set across all areas of the curriculum.

For all stages, READING AT HOME is considered to be very important. This could be shared stories with parents or children reading or just private reading for pleasure.

How Much Time Should Be Spent on Homework?

1. Homework will generally be set from Monday through to Thursday inclusive.
2. Directed or independent reading should be a regular part of the above ranges (10-15 minutes).
3. Parents should be alerted by teachers of any developing problems concerning their child’s homework.

The amount of homework set should take on average:
